Part 1 of a 4 part Newsletter
series on Worship:
"Why do we do
what we do?"

"Common Questions"

Remember that time you went to a church that was different from what you're used to. You saw things done differently, and you wondered to yourself, "Why do they do that? Or, why do we do what we do?" Well, our congregation is going through a period of transition with our worship, so thinking pro-actively I thought it might be helpful use the next few newsletter articles answer some of the most common questions that I hear about worship.

Here are three common questions that refer to worship in general.

1. Does worship have to be on Sunday? In short, no, but why? Most people might say because it is the Sabbath, and therefore commanded by God. But, this is only a part of the answer. Yes, for we Christians, Sunday is the Sabbath, a day to be devoted to rest and renewal. However, the gift of Sabbath rest has more to do with the way in which God renews us with the saving grace of his Word, rather than about calendar prohibitions. Essentially, any time that is set aside for hearing the Word of God becomes for us Sabbath time. Worship, then, is the time and place set aside by the congregation to gather together for the purpose of Sabbath, or hearing the Word of God.

2. Do we need an ordained pastor? Yes, here's why. From the beginning, when God established the disciplines and rituals for worship (read about it in the book of Exodus), it was understood as fitting for the designation of a person which the congregation would entrust with God's call to oversee right and proper worship. This call would be a holy and separate work for the benefit of all of God's people. This was the establishment of the priesthood. The role of the priest was two-fold. One, they were to intercede on behalf of the people for the communication of God's mercy. This was done through the sacrifice of animals. Two, they were to provide good and proper order to the worship and spiritual life of the congregation. They did this by upholding God's laws and directives concerning worship. Today, the title of priest is still a part of Christian denominations such as Catholic, Orthodox, and Episcopalian. The work that these priests do on behalf of their congregations is very different today, but essentially the role they play on behalf of God's people remains the same. For Lutherans, there is a deep, albeit very different, understanding of the priesthood. We believe that all who are faithful followers of Christ are made into a priesthood, and thereby especially called for the benefit of others. We are made into priests through faith and by the power of the Holy Spirit. We act out our priestly roles whenever we offer God's mercy, God's charity, God's love, God's compassion etc. to others. Jesus says to his follower Peter, "I will give you the keys of the kingdom of Heaven; whatever you bind on earth will be bound in heaven, and whatever you loose on earth will be loosed in heaven." Just as Jesus says that to his first faithful believers he says to us today, making all believers into a priesthood. Now, if all of us are priests, the question still remains, why do we Lutherans require a pastor to have worship? That answer is simple. The first role of the priesthood, to communicate the mercy of God assured through sacrifice, is done by the priesthood of all believers. But, the second role still remains, to designate someone who would provide good and proper order to the worship and spiritual practice of the congregation, according to God's will. Therefore, it is fitting that an ordained pastor be present and officiating at our worship services, and it is essential that the ordained minister officiate over Baptisms and Communion.

3. What kind of music is proper for worship? This is always a hot-button issue for congregations. I think, essentially, because the fullness of our experience with God in worship takes in all the sounds of a lifetime of worship, from our childhood to our current days. To change the music in worship is to change the way we experience God's transcendence in worship. So, it's easy to see why this topic can muster some of the most heated debates within congregations. However, if we allow scripture rather than tradition or personal experience to be our guide then the doors are wide open to various forms of music and art. "Make a joyful noise to the Lord." Psalm 100. One thing for sure from scripture is that the only musical instrument that is absolutely essential in worship is the singing of our voices. A worship service that doesn't invite congregational singing, probably wasn't a proper worship service. The use of musical instruments is not to make the worship pretty, entertaining, contemporary, or traditional. The use of musical instruments in worship has one primary objective: to get people singing. According to scripture, God would rather hear a few people sing their faithful hearts out to a kazoo player, than to hear the most magnificent organ played to an uninspired, unfaithful crowd of thousands. What kind of music is proper for worship? Whatever kind will inspire the congregation to sing their faithful hearts out to God.

There are, of course, more than three questions pertaining to worship. Maybe you have one. Feel free to ask yours. Next month's article will focus out questions specifically to the gathering portion of our worship service.

Blessings,

+Rich
